

Steve Caylor announces his retirement

From Steve Caylor: “I first came to Idaho in the fall of 1991 to serve as Trial Court Administrator in the 2nd Judicial District, (much to the relief of the then-acting TCA, District Judge Linda Copple Trout). In 2009, I was asked to be the Supreme Court’s Knowledge Management System Coordinator, much to the dismay of now acting TCA and Magistrate Judge Jay Gaskill. I am especially grateful to both of those judges, as well as the other judges from the 2nd District, past and present, whose examples have taught me so much. I have since been honored to help so many more of the judges, justices and court staff from around the state as the KM Coordinator. During these last twenty years I’ve seen the Idaho judiciary embrace principles of therapeutic justice, and rise through the challenges of tough times to its current eminence at the very top of the court systems in this country. Family and personal matters now compel my shift to a brand new role as a full-time grandfather and my last day at work is today. If I survive the explosive decompression of retirement I will hopefully be too busy chasing a five-year-old to miss you all as you deserve, but I will miss you. Some time ago I put down some thoughts about what it meant to me to work in the courts, which I’d like to share with you. If you’re curious, please search in the IKMS materials at <https://km.idcourts.us> for the keyword earth (my little bit is in the third item, but all six are worth reading). If you can’t remember your KM credentials, try these: username farewell and password goodbye. They will only be good until my friends and colleagues at the Help Desk figure out how to deactivate them! Peace to you all. I am grateful to have worked with you.”
